

CERTIFIED FOOD PROTECTION MANAGER

Introduction

California Health and Safety Code, Section 113947.1, requires at least one employee be certified as a food protection manager at every food establishment at which potentially hazardous foods are prepared, handled, or stored.

- restaurant,
- deli,
- school,
- coffee bar,
- commissary,
- mobile food facilities such as hot trucks, hotdog and coffee carts

What does the law require?

The following requirements must be met by each food facility that handles unpackaged foods.

#	Requirements
1	Employ at least one certified food protection manager.
2	A person cannot be certified for more than one location.
3	The certified food protection manager must be employed at the business, but need not be present at all times.
4	Certification must be renewed every five years.
5	The certified person will be responsible for food safety within the facility and responsible for the food safety training of all employees therein, consistent with their job.
6	The food safety certificate must be on file at all times and available for inspection.
7	A food facility that commences operation, changes ownership, or no longer has a certified employee, has 60 days to secure one.

Continued on next page

CERTIFIED FOOD PROTECTION MANAGER, continued

How to become certified

You can become certified by passing an approved and accredited food safety certification exam. The following is a list of approved accredited food safety certification exams. Certification must be renewed every five years.

Approved certification		Phone, website
National Restaurant Association ServSafe ®		(800) 765-2122 www.nraef.org
Prometric Assessments		(800) 624-2736 www.prometric.com/foodsafety
National Registry of Food Safety Profesionals Certification Examination		(800) 446-0257 www.nrfsp.com
360training.com, Inc. Learn2Serve ®		(888) 395-6920 http://www.learn2serve.com/food-manager-certification/

What happens if I do not have a certified food manager?

Failure to have at least one certified person may result in loss of your Health Permit To Operate and/or other enforcement actions and possible fines.

Questions

If you need further information, please contact County of Sacramento Environmental Management Department, Environmental Health Division at (916) 875-8440.